47. Explain how you derived this number. *

We track calls where we divert patients from the ED. We do not add calls where we suspect our involvement may have diverted a patient from the ED.

48. Provide one example of how your co-response program was able to help someone in behavioral health distress this quarter. *

A 23-year-old male experiencing an overdose was encountered by our co-response team. Recognizing his willingness to engage in treatment with Suboxone, we successfully advocated against an involuntary treatment order (ITA) and instead facilitated a voluntary approach. While hospital security initially raised concerns, we collaborated with the attending physician to allow the patient's girlfriend to be present in the room. Her support played a pivotal role in the patient's decision to accept treatment, ultimately contributing to a more positive outcome.

A 40-year-old female with schizoaffective disorder had a history of frequent law enforcement interactions, repeated 911 calls for medical assistance, and regular emergency department visits. For over three years, our team administered Invega Sustenna, a long-acting injectable medication, which contributed to a significant reduction in crisis events—she had no police involvement, no 911 calls related to social, medical, or behavioral concerns, and only one emergency department visit during that time. However, after being advised by a behavioral health case manager that she was not required to continue the medication, she discontinued treatment. Over the following months, her behavior escalated, ultimately resulting in violent incidents. She is now incarcerated again, and her housing stability is at risk.

49. Do you need any technical assistance from the UW or CROA?
